INTELLIGENCE DEFINITIONS

Memorandum for Acting D/DCI/IC

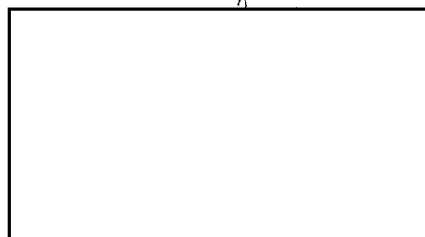

Revised
Insert A

Admiral Turner Revised Insert 2 as follows as

It is impossible to divide the collection of intelligence into distinct sub-categories. Intelligence collected, for instance, for ~~what~~ our broad national purposes may be of inestimable value to a military tactical commander in the field; ~~or~~ reverse a tactical commander's collecting elements may produce information that will be critical to immediate national decision-making. On the other hand, the production of intelligence can properly be categorized as national, departmental or tactical in the degree to which the estimates and analyses produced are tailored to the particular requirements of national, departmental, or tactical users.
